Why the Cat in the Hat was never adored

44 3 8

Chapter 1 by Katana S. Kill

Four-year-old Cameron was looking through a Cat in the Hat book. He flipped to a blank page. Suddenly, words began to appear: "If you wish to live longer, a quest I hold for you. The Cat has gone nuts and wants to kill me! I live in the old town of Boondy Roondy of Clakamoony. -Dr. Suess".

Cameron screamed in terror.

Chapter 2 by SaintSayaka

Cameron, being four, was less afraid of the actual text than of the sudden bloodstains that began to take over the book, crimson and heavy. He couldn't really read, after all. It's basic child psychology.

But what he could understand was that he was in immediate danger. He tugged at his mother, who was asleep next to him. He began to cry. She had been asleep for so long. He needed her now. Again, he tugged at her shoulder. Nothing.

Now, Cameron was a volcano of hysteria. He would have continued to bawl if a clothed hand shoved him into the bathroom.
